New Mexico Judiciary Launches Newly Redesigned Website

SANTA FE – The New Mexico Judiciary is launching a new website, www.nmcourts.gov to improve public access to state courts.

Users can browse the restyled website beginning Saturday, June 25.

For the first time, there will be a consistent design and navigation for judicial web pages, whether it's for the Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, district courts, the Bernalillo County Metropolitan Court, magistrate courts or the Administrative Office of the Courts.

The updated website also is mobile-friendly to make it easily viewable on different devices, whether it's a smartphone or tablet.

"The redesigned website will help members of the public more quickly and easily find essential information about New Mexico's courts and the wide range of services offered by the Judiciary," said Artie Pepin, director of the Administrative Office of the Courts.

"As more and more people access the internet through mobile devices, the Judiciary wanted a responsive website providing users with the same experience whether they are searching for court information with a smartphone, or at home and work with a desktop or laptop computer," said Pepin.

In the past, not all district courts had an online presence. Content and web page designs varied. With the roll out of the redesign, the web pages of New Mexico's courts and court programs will feature a consistent look and feel and make services easier to access.
